Synopsis

A contemporary play about a young couple at the end of a working holiday in London, all set to leave for France and backpack around Europe. But they witness a murder; and could be the only witnesses. Should they help the police and risk missing out on their long-awaited holiday; and then there's the small matter of overdue working visas? Or should they leave for their European trip and hope that someone else saw the crime? If they stay silent, they be able to cope in the long term with this moral dilemma of their own making? Winner of '09 Noosa Playwriting Competition ideal for senior teens , drama groups, festivals.
